Large group labs for running computer based batteries of cognitive tests and online studies. Typical studies include understanding how people are motivated to engage in online, why and when we feel secure in disclosing information online and what types of privacy we seek to protect.