

We use a range of eye trackers, which include an SR-Research Eyelink 1000 desktop and Eyelink II headset.

These are used to conduct studies with a range of clinical populations in order to understand the underlying factors that influence their behaviour.

Eye tracking is also used to do usability testing by mapping how people pay attention to specific features on a website or app.

